SHIFTING SANDS

by Gladys Reece

Another year has passed, and have you stopped to think of the changes that have taken place in our little city? Think how we must look now to the wanderer who has but recently returned. We who have stayed on in our own partcular little ruts have taken the changes for granted, and it takes the out-of-town visitor, or that long-lost relative to point them out to us.

Take. for instance, the new Legion Hall on the main drag—remember how we used to trot around in that little place up at the end of Visitacion Avenue? There was'nt enough room for the orchestra, then—let alone a crowd of stomping jitterbugs like us! And across the street from the Legion Hall—how about Les's Market? Seems to me that it wasn't so long ago that we were startling other Peninsulans with our references to the Thee Market! And on the other side of the postoffice, there used to be just a place called Luxury Cleaners AND Waldy's Men store.

We can even get up-to-date and professional looking photographs here now—thanks to Ted Lehning and Louise Terry and Bob Boomer. I know, because that's what I gave for Christmas this year—and a better job of photographing a king-sized family I've never seen! And look at Phil's Fountain—seems to me I remember working for a couple of nice people named Ed and Dell Krampert not so long ago — and now look at it! It's Laing's Fountain now, with a couple of pretty swell people named Fred and Shirley Laing presiding over it. The Laings USED to be San Carlos citizens—but from what I've been hearing, and seeing—they're darned near our own citizens now.

And on up the street from there, remember Buzzie and Ellen in the Beauty Parlor ? Well, there's a little lady in there now who calls herself Bea Graulty. lately of Ora's of Hollywood, and she can make you feel like a movie queen if you will just give her a half a chance. Next door to her you'll find two busy and beautiful blondes by name of Grace Vanderkar and Ladella Carr, in what is now known as Van's Dress Shop. Seems like just yesterday that we saw Ruth Mack in and out of Mack's Dress Shop. We all miss Rudy, but Grace and Ladella are making themselves right at home and twice as welcome as they look

And look how beautiful the church across the street is now—with it's new carpet of lawn and flowers. Seems like no time at all since we were hopping over clump of weeds and stuff. And speaking of churches. how about the new one over on San Bruno Avenue? Makes one feel like Christmas all year around, doesn't it? And while we're over on San Bruno Avenue—how about what used to be Cline's Grocery -- have you met Rose Cleary, of Cleary's Grocery yet? If you haven't— you've missed meeting a very nice person.

Back on the Main street of our litle city, how about that new litle Hobby Shop where you can buy model airoplanes and things? Life can be pretty dull without a hobby of some kind, you know. I've got six, myself. No more nervous crack-ups for me! I'm too busy! Speaking of keeping busy -- have you noticed the lady with the six arms up there in the new branch bakery? She'd have to have hat many to keep up with the customers I've seen streaming in there after the good things she keeps on her shelves. In case you don't already know the lady —her name is Mrs. Green. Another busy place is Tom's Shoe Store. where there used to be a little coffee shop, remember? Tom seems to be doing right well. and he's got a right nice stock of shoes. I should know, I'm wearing a pair of them today.

And, keeping up with the Jones's, I suppose -- only in our case, it's keeping up with the best of the Peninsula -- how about that new Laundromat in the basement of that house next door to Scott's Fountain of Youth? And the Used Car Lot next to that? Think we can't do things in a big way. once we get started, huh? And going on down the street from there, it has not been so long ago that we were greeted at the door of the local theatre by Ralph and Susie Dostal. And then for some six months or so, we got acquainted with Jim Boyd. And now. all of a sudden, there seems to be two new theatre magnates in our midst—name of Leaskou and Mentis. But they'll be sore if you don't call them Jim and Chris. And what's more, we've got a lot to thank them for. Have you noticed the different kind of pictures the kids are getting to see on Saturday afternoons now? Chris Mentis says he intends to show the kind of pictures for kids that we mothers want our kids to see. instead of the adult fare we definitely don't want them to see. Bless 'em for that, I says.

All these things are on the credit side of the ledger—but there's a debit side, too. Meaning, of course, the blackened and empty-looking building where once was Gil's busy and thriving drugstore. We miss seeing Gil and Francis amidst all the good things we could buy there, and we miss not being able to take our pet cat in for Gil to look over and pronounce either dead. dying, or among the land of living in spite of its bedraggled and haggard appearance. Speaking of cats, Gil's own little cat was a familiar sight in and around the drugstore, wasn't she? I'll bet she wishes he'd hurry up and open up again, so she could greet all her old friends too.

All-in-all. I think we can be pretty proud of our little city. Who could call us a "Ho-Hum Hamlet" now, and mean it, huh?

What's in a Name?

HANS WAGNER, one-time great Pittsburgh infielder, tells of two rookies who once came up to the Pirates at the end of a season.

The manager wanted to try them out at the plate, so he decided to give them a turn at bat one day when his team had a good lead.

The first rookie approached the plate.

"What's your name and who are you batting for?" the umpire asked.

"My name's Riggs and I'm batting for myself," was the fast reply.

The umpire's face crimsoned, but he allowed the remark to pass.

When the second rookie—a small shy boy came up, the umpire was in no mood for another wisecrack.

"And what's your name and for whom are you batting?" he asked.

The newcomer hesitated, coughed, and then blurted, "Boo!"

This was too much. Flinging his mask to the ground. shaking an angry finger before the rookie's face, the umpire yelled, "Out of the game."

But the youth was completely innocent. His name was Boo Everet Too.

By BRIS - BETTE

Whether you've attempted making yeast rolls or not, you'll find these so easy to do, and so delicious, you'll be delighted. If you want the baked fresh for dinner, start them shortly before lunch.

First, pare 1 medium-sized potato and cook in 1 cupful of water until well done. Drain, saving the water; put the potato through a strainer, and add the water in which it was cooked. Add ¼ cupful of butter, ¼ cupful of sugar. 2 cupfuls of milk, and heat to boiling. Sprinkle in 2 tablespoonfuls of cornmeal (white meal, preferably). and cook, stirring constantly, for 2 minutes, or until the mixture is like heavy cream. Turn into a large mixing bowl (put through a strainer if there are any lumps) and let cool to lukewarm; then add 1 cake of compressed yeast dissolved in ½ cupful of lukewarm water, and beat in 1 cupful of flour. Cover and set the bowl in a warm place for about 2 hours, or until the sponge is very light and foamy.

At this time. add 2 teaspoonfuls of salt, and about 4 cupfuls of sifted flour, and mix well. Add more flour a little at a time. as needed, to make a medium-stiff dough. It should still be slightly sticky when you finish kneading it. Form the dough into a neat ball in the bowl, rub with melted butter, cover. and set aside again to rise until fully double its original size. Punch it down, then let is rise again until double the bulk.

At this point, form into rolls, either by pinching off bits of dough and molding them into balls for clover-leaf rolls. or long cylinders for pan rolls; or roll out about ¾ inch thick on a lightly floured board and cut wih a biscuit cutter, crease. and fold for Parker-house rolls. Part of the dough may be rolled out seperately, spread with soft butter. brown sugar, cinnamon, and raisins. rolled up and cut in 1½-inch slices for cinnamon rolls. Whatever type of rolls are made. place them in well-greased pans, leaving plenty of room for expansion; brush the tops with melted butter, and let rise until double in size. Bake in a moderately hot oven (425°) for 12 to 15 minutes. Remove from pans on taking from the oven. These may be reheated for serving; they are good till the last one is gone. The recipe makes 3 to 4 dozen rolls.

WIENER SCALLOP

6 medium-sized potatoes. pared
6 frankfurters
1 egg, beaten
2 cup fulls of milk
Salt and pepper to taste
Buttered crumbs
Grated American Cheese

Into buttered casserole slice 4 of the potatoes in ⅛-inch slices. On these arrange the frankfurters, then slice the remaining potatoes over the top. Beat the egg with the milk, season lightly (remember that the wieners are well-seasoned), and pour over the contents of the casserole. Sprinkle the top sparingly with buttered crumbs and grated cheese, and bake slowly (at 350 degrees) about an hour, or until the potatoes are tender. This should serve 6, but our family of 4 makes it disappear rapidly.

Mix some corn flakes with your grated cheese to top an au gratin dish and you won't go wrong. Makes it look well. Tastes wonderful.

Drained Bartlett pears stuffed with Cambert cheese and served on lettuce with creamed mayonnaise are salad and dessert in one.

FREER AND DAVENPORT WEDDING

United in marriage in a quiet ceremony at the home of the Rev. R. S. Beal of Mendocino St. were Mrs. Mattie Davenport of San Bruno and Clement L. Freer, longtime resident of Brisbane.

Matron of honor was Edna Davenport; best man, Alvin Eckols.

Attending the wedding were Mrs. Freer's son and daughter-in-law, the William Davenports of Oakland.

A small reception followed in the new home of the newlyweds on Sierra Point Road, Brisbane.

SCHOOL PARTY HELD AT BRISBANE

The Brisbane Elementary school held its annual Christmas "open house" for the purpose of demonstrating to the parents and the public the educational program carried on in the school. This year the public was asked to visit all the classrooms so that they might see how the children progress from grade to grade.

A program of carols by the orchestra and glee club was presented for the assembled parents and teachers and pupils. The glee club was accompanied by Mrs. Betty Sullivan, seventh grade teacher, while members of the orchestra were under the supervision of Miss Patricia Jefferson, director.

This year, for the first time, Brisbane's elementary school has a combined glee club of 72 boys and girls from the fifth through the eighth grade. String instruments have been added to the school band this year, making an orchestra composed of 36 members from the sitxh, seventh and eighth grades.

Each schoolroom concentrated on one subject to demonstrate for this open house,, most of them choosing different countries to make posters and paint pictures about. The work books lying on the desks all dealt with the particular subject chosen by that certain grade. One room. Miss Nelson's third grade, had set up a miniature post office.

After the program and inspection of schoolrooms, refreshments were served in the cafeteria by the parent-teacher association.

DAVENPORT - ECKOLS WEDDING

CHAPTER III
THE ASSISTANT D. A. PAYS A VISIT

Mrs. Sherman, the manager of the apartment house, was escorting the Assistant District Attorney up to Virginia Weston's penthouse. VO SADU . . VO SADU . . the music coming from the apartment sounded like a funeral dirge.

Virginia answered the door . . she was smiling . . Virginia always smiled . . especially when there was a man around . . and the Assistant D. A. was handsome . . tall . . um . . dark and dissipated looking . . a veteran of many cocktail parties in and about San Francisco. Virginia was thankful she had changed to attractive red satin house-pajamas . . she smoothed her black hair . . caught a fleeting glance in the hall mirror . .relaxed.

Kit Thompson stood in the doorway to the kitchen . . this made it so convenient in replenishing her hi-ball glass. She preened herself . . her hair might have a greenish tint next week . . but this week it was a lovely deep shade of blue . . she reached around for her drink . . knocked it over . . damn . . there was plenty more in the bottle . . she made a good job pouring.

Mary Anderson sat huddled in a large chair . . she looked small . . but when she stood up . . she was really a big girl . . there was a quiet resigned air about her.

These were Josephine's Folk-dancing friends . . they had all started dancing a year ago at the LOOSEBELT HI SCHOOL . . lived in the same apartment house on Bush and Powell Streets in downtown San Francisco.

The Assistant D. A. showed them the sharp steel needle found in Josephine's heart . . Mary indentified it as a crochet hook Josephine had used in lace making . . the hook part was barely discenible . . Jo did such fine work.

Kit weaved a bit . . rallied . . the Ass. D. A. was sure good lookin' . . she volunteered . . Jo was Rooshin . . some mistake in her father's sizzenship papers . . her name is Petroff . . reached in her bosom for a gigarette . . maybe some Rooshin killed her.

Virginia smiled sweetly . . dear Josephine . . the poor kid . . was such a nice girl . . so much fun . . I can't imagine how we are going on without her.

The Ass. D. A. was positive it was murder . . when the missing bracelet is found . . the guilty party will be apprehended. He warned them not to leave San Francisco.

Mrs. Sherman and the Ass. D. A. left. Kit walked over and put on a record. BRUDER LUSTIG burst forth wildly . . whined into its YO, HA HA . . Mary impatiently tried to shut it off . . the needle stuck . . YO, HA HA . . YO. HA HA . . ehoed throgcuh the apartment house . . following Mrs. Sherman and the Ass. D. A. down the flight of stairs to the fourth floor where they waited for the elevator . . YO, HA HA, YO, HA HA . . HA HA . . ha ha ha.

BRISBANE BOYS IN CAGE WINS

Good ball handling and good defense gave the Brisbane Boys Club's 110-pound and 120-pound basketball teams victories over the Hayes Valley teams recently. The 110's won 27-24, the 120's finished in front 35-27.

Eddie Davenport, who coaches both Brisbane Club quintets, also praised the teamwork on both his winning aggregations. He described it as "wonderful."
